GETTING AROUND OAHU

Oahu’s public transit system, called TheBus, is a simple and convenient way to get to most attractions in Honolulu and Waikiki. Adult fare is $2.50* one-way, but a four-day unlimited visitor pass is also available for $25.* Visit www.thebus.org for custom trip planning (allow 3 days advance notice) as well as routes to most major attractions on the island.

Although TheBus can also take you to locations on windward Oahu and the North Shore, many visitors prefer to rent a car for a few days to journey out of Honolulu on their own. A loop of the entire island is only 90 miles—an easy day trip. Roads to even the more remote destinations are usually well maintained, and driving rules are the same as anywhere else in the U.S., except that speed limits tend to be lower. As in any major city, traffic in downtown Honolulu can be aggravating. Just avoid morning and evening rush hours and allow a few extra minutes to reach your destination and find a parking spot. Or rent a bicycle or moped in Waikiki! Outside of the city, traffic is rarely a problem.

When driving around Oahu, consider packing a cooler with drinks and snacks. You’ll encounter farm stands along rural roads offering the freshest shrimp, pineapple, and watermelon you’ve ever had, but convenience stores and fast food restaurants are harder to come by. With so many scenic outlooks and breathtaking beaches, you’ll find better views from a picnic bench than you will from any restaurant.

Any time you park your car at a lookout or trailhead, be sure to lock it and make sure valuables aren’t visible.

*Fares valid at the time of printing.

Cathedral of Our Lady of Peace

The oldest cathedral in continuous use in the United States was consecrated on Bishop Street in Honolulu in 1843. King Kamehameha III gave land from the royal estate to Roman Catholic missionaries as a gesture of reconciliation after years of tension between the island's religious groups. Groundbreaking took place in July of 1840 and the foundation was laid from blocks of coral gathered from nearby shores. Father Damien, famous for his work at the leper colony on Molokai, was ordained here in 1864.
